Martial Law Ends Today In Texas Oil Field Town

Martial Law Head Says Mission Accomplished and Town Clean.

RANGERS TO REMAIN

New Officers Given High Praise By General Wolters.

BORGER, Tex., Oct. 18.—(AP)—Borger will bid farewell to Texas national guardsmen at 3:50 p. m. today, Brigadier General Jacob F. Wolters announced Thursday.

At that hour, the guardsmen, "their mission accomplished," will leave, subject, however to recall by Governor Moody. Martial law will not be lifted until the governor signs proclamations, the general said.

General Wolters said he was "leaving the city clean" with "law and order supreme."

Mission Accomplished

"The mission assigned us by Governor Dan Moody has been accomplished," the statement began. It then complimented the new officers. He praised Texas Ranger C. O. Moore, appointed sheriff to succeed Joe Ownbey, resigned; W. A. Henderson mayor successor to Glenn A. Pace, resigned; Albert Mace, police chief, successor to John W. Crabtree, resigned. Clem Calhoun, first sent to Borger by the governor as a special investigator and later named district attorney, was described as "able, conscientious and fearless."

"Texas will hear more of this extraordinary young man who is among the state's best prosecutors." Calhoun was district attorney at Abilene before his assignment to Borger.

The commander of the guardsmen also commended County Attorney Henry D. Meyers, County Judge H. M. Hood, who "has stood out in bold relief against a background both tragic and pathetic," District Judge E. J. Pickens as "able and courageous" and the county commissioners.

New Officers Worthy

A justice of the peace and two constables remain to be appointed for Borger. Those appointments can be made after martial law is lifted, General Wolters said.

Ranger Captain Tom Hickman is to remain in Borger with his force until the sheriff's and police chief's departments are in operation, and two rangers are to be detailed for "indefinite" duty in the oil town.

Twelve men held under General Order No. Six, which specifies that all members of the entrenched criminal ring could be held until obedience to law had been restored, will not be freed when troops leave Borger. It was believed they would be held until they can be tried.

The 12 held are Cal Baird, former deputy sheriff, J. D. Lee, D. T. Blasingame, former policeman; Sam Jones, ousted deputy constable; John Harkness, John Ware, G. Louis Crim, Leroy Dempsey Don McCombs, H. O. Taylor, F. C. Cleveland and T. A. Board.

Rev. Dr. William L. Stidger, pastor of the Copley Methodist Episcopal church of Boston, who, from his pulpit, has attacked the Daughters of the American Revolution as "one of the greatest organized menaces to world harmony and peace," is shown above. Threats of the D. A. R. to sue him for slander failed to stop his attacks.

Georgia Receives 122-Pound Melon

DAWSON, Ga., Oct. 18.—(AP)—Perhaps the largest watermelon ever seen in this section arrived in Dawson Monday from Hope, Arkansas. It weighs 122 pounds, and was sent by Mr. C. B. Lawhorn to his father, Mr. Otis Lawhorn of Bronwood, who wrote that the melon cost $10. It is of dark green color and nearly round. It will be on exhibit at the Southwest Georgia Exposition next week.

Mr. Lawhorn stated in his letter that melons the size of this one are common in this section of Arkansas and many weigh 50 pounds and upward.

Melons are not grown to such proportions in Terrell county or this section, but the delicious flavor is enough to satisfy the natives.

Mr. Otis Lawhorn, the recipient of the melon, states that he has been offered as much as ten cents apiece for seed from it.

Stars Accused of Income Tax Frauds

Woman Attorney Says Movie Stars Made False Returns.

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 18. Alleged false claims for exemptions from income taxes made by a half-dozen Hollywood celebrities were cited by the United States government yesterday in a bill of particulars filed at the request of attorneys for Miss Marjorie Berger, income tax attorney.

Miss Berger is to go on trial next week on charges of feloniously aiding clients in making fraudulent tax statements. Those named in the bill filed today were: Rod la Rocque, Mitchell Lewis and William Haines, featured screen players; Dorothy Mackail, actress; George Marion Jr., playwright, and Robert W. Browne an actor.

The government accused La Rocque of expending a portion of $1,144.66 in 1927 on liquor and claiming exemption for it under the head of "entertainment." Lewis was charged with spending $378.76 on liquor in 1926 and classifying it

Policeman John DeVeny was shot in the leg and H. L. Howenstein, Michigan City, was also wounded. Neither are thought to be seriously hurt.

Police Chief Albert Brown said it had not been ascertained definitely how much money the bandits scooped up before dashing out of the bank. They fired into the rapidly gathering crowd as they entered their automobile, the bullets striking the policeman and Howenstein.

Girls Like Men Teachers But Boys Prefer Women

CHICAGO, Oct. 18.—Men teachers and women teachers came out even in a survey conducted by the Englewood High School student paper here to determine which were more popular students. The only preference that could be determined showed that the boys prefer women and that girls would rather be taught by men.

Points listed by the boys, favoring the feminine instructors, were that they were more sympathletic and understood the students better and put more enjoyment into the classwork. The men were credited with being fairer as instructors and with teaching more from experience.

The jury was out from 11:20 yesterday morning until 1:37 this morning. Mrs. Burgess' sanity was the point on which the jurors differed in reaching an agreement. The verdict carries with it a life sentence.

MILWAUKEE, Oct. 18.—One hears of denial of robbery by the accused and the insistence of the deed by the accuser, but when the tables are turned—. That is the question which grew out of the case in which Bruce Spence, confessed narcotic thief, figured here recently.

While he was charged with six thefts, Spence asserted he had robbed the office of Dr. H. C. Ladewig, Milwaukee physician. Dr. Ladewig was firm in his denial of the robbery. Spence was equally insistent that he had committed a felony. The judge held the case open to determine whether the prisoner was a drug addict.

Doheny's Wife Is Witness for Fall

Knew of Loan Her Husband Made To Secretary of Interior

WASHINGTON, Oct. 18. (AP)—Mrs. Carrie Estelle Doheny, wife of Edward L. Doheny whom the government charges bribed Albert B. Fall with $100,000 to obtain the Elk Hill, Cal., naval oil lease, testified today that Fall's signature had been torn from a note for that amount so that the former secretary would not be embarrassed should anything happen while she and her husband were returning to their home.

She said her husband told her to keep the signature carefully so it would be available when the time came to present the note for payment.

Mrs. Doheny was on the stand but a short while before her husband was called. Regarded as the most important witness of the defense, Doheny has said the $100,000 was only "a loan to an old friend in need."

"Unidentified" Ads Draw Crowds To Store

BOSTON, Oct. 18.—(AP)—A large Boston store recently used hundreds of columns of newspaper space to advertise a single sale. The advertising matter in one issue of a single newspaper filled 12 pages. The store was not mentioned.

Apparently the deliberate omission of the name of the firm did not hurt the drawing power of the advertisements, for customers filled the store from early morning until late in the evening.

The secret of the success of these unidentified advertisements lay in the distinctive style of advertising always employed by the store. So well associated are the store and its advertising in the public mind that many read the advertisements without noticing that the advertiser's name was not mentioned.

Another Howard County Vat Blown Up By Dynamite

No Clue Found To Identity of Persons Setting Off the Charge.

SECOND TIME BLOWN

Only Slightly Damaged At First Blast But Now Destroyed.

NASHVILLE, Oct. 18.—The cattle dipping vat on the C. A. Dildy farm at Temperanceville was dynamited and completely destroyed at about midnight Tuesday night.

Several months ago the vat at that place was dynamited, only partial destruction resulting from the explosion, and the vat was repaired and put back into use in connection with the cattle dipping program being carried out in the county. An arrest was made in connection with the first dynamiting, but the grand jury investigated the evidence leading to the arrest and exonerated the man arrested.

This is the first evidence of opposition to the cattle dipping program in the county for some time, and it was thought by the dipping forces that the people had all determined to go through with the program without further demonstration. Federal officials visiting the county recently expressed themselves highly pleased with the progress of the campaign in the county, and expressed the belief that it would not be long until the quarantine can be lifted from the county and the dipping program ended.

No clue has been found to the identity of the persons who blew the vat Tuesday night.

Texas Oil Brings Huge University Endowment

SAN ANGELO, Tex. Oct. 18.—(AP)—Oil from the 2,000,000-acre "campus" of the University of Texas is lighting the lamp of learning for generations to come.

Within a year, royalties from oil produced on university properties in western Texas have become the school's largest single item of endowment. This year's royalties have raised it to more than $32,000,000, a figure exceeded by only four other schools.

Continued discoveries of new gushers on university land have led petroleum experts to predict that the school's wealth eventually will exceed that of such schools as Harvard, Columbia, Yale and Chicago.

The Nuisance of the Billboard

ARTHUR NEWTON PACK, editor of Nature Magazine, recently made an automobile tour of the Shenandoah valley in Virginia, and returned from it in a state of extreme indignation.

Mr. Pack's sensibilities were so stirred by the prevalence in the valley of unsightly billboards that he promptly wrote a letter about it to Governor Byrd. Portions of that letter—applying, as they do, to every state as well as to Virginia—are worth reproducing here:

"On every side great 60-foot signs mar the landscape, leaving gaping wounds. They dance up and down the valley pike and the Lee highway in a delirium of misplaced color. They cut off view after view.

"Even the battlefields, sacred to southern memory, are not sacred to the invading army of billboard builders. Great glowing signs stand watch beside the Manassas battlefield and brazon out their message close to where the south's heroes lie.

"The tourist trade in these days is an important one, bringing millions of dollars within the commonwealth. Since there are thousands of places to visit, the national parks for example, in which the landscape is allowed to preserve untouched its beauty, what will be the result to any state that allows its charm to be destroyed and its scenery marred by a few advertisers?"

Mr. Pack jumps on Virginia, of course, because that happened to be where he took his drive. But every other state offends just as badly, and every state might as well assume that that letter was addressed to it.

The billboard is a nuisance; and the fact that there is not much of any way in which the law can reach it, since it is almost invariably erected on private property, makes the problem of its control a tough one. We can only hope that the advertisers eventually will realize that is is poor policy to thrust their pleas before the eyes of people who are looking for scenic beauty.

A Poor Idea

SPORTS writers are predicting that the custom of playing colloge football games at night, tried out this year by an increasing number of schools, is going to spread. And, despite the fact that this will enable more people to see the games, the idea leaves us cold.

We have a hunch that playing football at night won't be nearly as much fun for the players. Foodlights are a mighty poor substitute for bright autumn sunlight. Turf that is springy on a bright afternoon is November can turn pretty hard and cold at night. Unpleasant weather will be just about 100 per cent worse.

And, after all, it is the player for whom football exists. Playing the games at night is just one more indication that some of our colleges are forgetting that fact. The spectators ought not to have much of anything to say about it.

The Woman Buys

IF you have something to sell, concentrate your efforts on the women folks. They are the people who control the country's purse strings.

This, at any rate, is the conclusion one reaches after hearing recent remarks by Rebecca Loose Trauger, head of the women's department of the Morris Plan Company of Philadelphia.

"A well-known authority on women's activities," she says, "states that women control the spending of more than eighty-five per cent of the nation's payroll; that 42 per cent of the wealth of the country is in the women's hands; that one-fifth of the trading on the New York Stock Exchange on the biggest day last year was carried on by women. Surely women occupy more than ever before in the world's history places of financial importance in the home and in business."

Motor car manufacturers for years have said that it is essential for them to build cars that appeal to women. Apparently the same thing holds good for other manufacturers as well.

"Jack and Jill" Try Their Luck Again!

WASHINGTON LETTER

BY RODNEY DUTCHER

Washington — After inheriting such major unsolved problems as farm relief and prohibition enforcement from his predecessor, as well as vexing fiscal worries caused by the Coolidge passion for economy, President Hoover recently took his worst licking to date from Congress when the Senate coldly turned down his demand that the flexible provisions be retained in the tariff bill.

It was rather a smack for Mr. Hoover, but it was also a postponed kick for Mr. Coolidge, the famous author. The flexible provision, established in 1922, authorized the president to advance or lower duties by as much as 50 per cent upon recommendation of the bi-partisan tariff commission. The House bill would have abolished the bi-partisan nature of the commission so as to give the president power to stack the commission as he liked. Mr. Hoover made a strong public plea for retention of the flexible provision when it appeared to be endangered.

It Was Coolidge's Fault

But the Senate looked back at the administration of the provision by Mr. Coolidge, and Democrats and progressives decided that it had proved too tempting to allow them to trust presidents with it any more. The fact is that Mr. Coolidge was too stingy to let the tariff commission play with the thing; he undertook to cajole and threaten the uncontrolled members unto letting him use it only as he saw fit. His arrogation was so remarkably thorough that the Senate took it away from Mr. Hoover.

If we dig up some of the old scandal herewith, the background of the Hoover defeat will be easily explained. This scandal was effectively used in debate with the result that unless the House forces its will on the Senate, Mr. Hoover will have no control over duties except his power to veto the bill. The Senate provision confines action on the commission's recommendation to Congress.

The manhandling of the flexible provision began with the commission's sugar investigation beginning in 1923. Coolidge and his friends on the commission, Marvin and Burgess, did all they could to delay the investigation, which was pushed by Commissioners Costigan, Culbertson and Lewis, as if aware that the commission would recommend a rate reduction, as it finally did. Coolidge appointed as the sixth commissioner one Henry H. Glassie of Louisiana, who admitted that his wife and her brothers held domestic sugar stocks. Glassie insisted on sitting on the sugar case and Coolidge backed him up.

The question of ethics was heavily involved. Congress had to pass a special law to keep Glassie out of the sugar case, which left Costigan, Culbertson and Lewis in a majority. Marvin and Glassie insisted that Glassie stay in on the case until the end of the fiscal year. Dilatory and obstructive tactics continued.

Coolidge suddenly demanded that the commission suspend all other work and concentrate on a butter investigation! Chairman Marvin at once withdrew from the sugar deliberations in obedience, demonstrating palpable presidential interference.

Then President Coolidge undertook to bring pressure on the three recalcitrant commissioners. He summoned Culbertson and cited to him a complaint that he had violated the law prohibiting commissioners from accepting other employment by lecturing at the Georgetown Foreign Service School and the Institute of Politics. Both Harding and Coolidge had approved these lectures, but Coolidge told Culbertson he had better see the Justice Department about it. Costigan and Lewis called there and were told Culbertson had little to fear.

Suddenly Coolidge ordered Attorney General Stone to rush his report on the matter to the White House and next day Coolidge told Culbertson of a decision that he was "technically violating the law." The president said he would like to have the sugar report delayed.

Meanwhile, Culbertson was being tempted with all sorts of other attractive federal jobs. It looked to some people as if he were being both baited and threatened at the same time. Costigan, Culbertson and Lewis felt that the sugar interests were active.

BARBS

The investigation of the capital may not reveal that Washington is dry, but so long as they keep printing the Congressional Record there will be one very dry article there anyway.

Several senators are said to be vexed with President Hoover because he rejected their advice on debentures. That should be a good recommendation in case the president should resign and hunt up another job.

Vitamins have been found in hash, according to a dispatch, but it isn't said whether or not someone cracked his teeth on some of them.

Daylight saving time may be all right in summer but it's a bad habit to teach the roosters.

as "advertising and publicity."

Assistant United States Attorney P. V. Davis said the alleged discrepancies were found in tax statements prepared for the two men by Miss Berger.

A second instance cited in the La Rocque return for 1927 was an alleged improper reduction of $13,500 on which exemption was claimed as salary for La Rocque's business manager. The government asserted the actor had "no business manager" and that the money was a gift to his mother.

Davis cited among other charges that a deduction of $15,848 in the return of Dorothy Mackail as payment of salary to a "business manager" was improper "for the reason the taxpayer had no business manager."

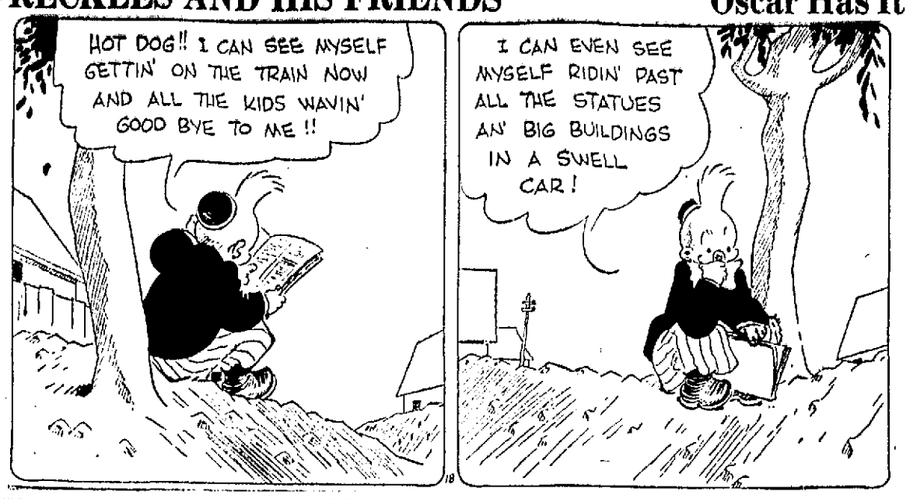

The deduction of $218.79 from the statement of William Haines as "advertising and publicity" in 1925 was assailed by Davis. "As a matter of fact," he said, "we have information that he spent this money to go home at Christmas time."

The declaration involving Browne pointed out a deduction of $450 in 1925 for a chauffeur. "He had no chauffeur," the government contended. Another accusation concerning George Marion referred to a claimed exemption of $396 for "advertising and publicity" which in reality, Davis said was spent to purchase two cigarette cases for his wife.

Dear Lady:

May I suggest? It isn't always the fault of your husband if his appearance falls a wee bit short of your own fastidious feminine standards—in a way you are the guardian of his good looks.

To begin with, you know his mind is already at the office, when he dresses for the day. And of course, once he puts on his clothes, he's on the inside looking out.

He can't even see the spot on his lapel, so distressingly conspicuous to other eyes. He isn't aware of the spattered mud on the back of his trouser leg, nor will he see the pearl gray streak that will appear on his white collar, from the dusty collar of his coat.

Don't let him go innocently forth to business, while his clothes talk behind his back.

Why don't you have Hall-Moses call for his clothes regularly?

AUTHOR OF "RICH GIRL—POOR GIRL," ETC.

THIS HAS HAPPENED

Helen Page feels indebted to and in love with her guardian, Leonard Brent. The latter changes his plans for her future after meeting a dying beggar, Nellin, and tells the girl she is heiress of a millionaire named Cunningham. Brent takes her to the lonely old man and offers proofs which Cunningham accepts, as he had been searching for his dead daughter's child for years.

Among Helen's new friends are Eva Ennis and her brother Robbert, who falls in love with her. Brent becomes jealous of Bob and plots to win Helen quickly, especially after finding another locket like the one he had taken from Nellin to prove Helen the heiress. Hearing that a sudden shock would kill Cunningham, Brent slyly administers the shock, and the servants find the old man dead in bed. Then, by clever acting and appeal to her loyalty Brent wins Helen's promise to marry him.

Later, she and Bob discover their true love for each other and he is angry when she tells him she cannot break her engagement even though she loves him. Bob flirts with Shallimar Morris, not knowing that Helen has tried to break with Brent after finding him indulging in a love affair with another woman. But he had refused to release her and had made dire threats if she tried to throw him over.

Eva realizes that Helen is unhappy, but resents her treatment of Bob which has driven him to Shallimar. But Eva is worried, too, for Brent is now avoiding her after having made ardent love to her secretly. She scolds Bob and he laughs at her, saying that Helen is engaged to Brent. Eva collapses and admits that Brent has been making love to her secretly.

to her. Bob goes to tell Helen the kind of cad she is engaged to, and while he is there an urgent call comes from his mother.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XL

Helen ran to the telephone. Mrs. Ennis would not call her on a trivial matter, she knew. It must concern Eva.

"This is Miss Nellin—Helen," she cried when she picked up the receiver. What is it, Mrs. Ennis?"

The voice that came back to her in answer was fraught with fear. "Is Bob there?" it asked.

"Yet, yes," Helen said. "Do you want to talk with him?"

"Please." The voice was growing fainter.

"It is your mother," Helen looked up at Bob, who had followed close upon her exit from the breakfast room, and her expression frightened him.

"What is it?" he asked hoarsely.

Helen did not answer and he repeated the question over the wire. "What's wrong, mother?"

"Oh come home son, at once," she entreated him. "I don't know what's the matter with Eva. She is . . . she is . . ."

"I'll be there right away" Bob jumped up, not stopping even to put the receiver back on the hook.

"We'll take my car; it's faster," Helen said, hastening along beside him.

"Mine's, at the door," Bob reminded her.

"So is mine. I was going to drive over and find out why Eva went home so early this morning."

True, the car was at the door. They lost not an unnecessary second in getting it started and headed toward the highway. Helen had taken the wheel because she felt Bob might think too much of her safety to drive as fast as he'd have dared alone.

Knowing every foot of the road gave Helen supreme confidence Where the traffic lights were stationed she slowed up just enough to see if the road was clear, then she shot across, red or green.

In her mind and in Bob's was the same thought. Eva was desperate. No one could tell what she would do. Her quiet, sweet exterior covered, both knew, a temperamental fire. It was revealed in her music, in all that she did and said that was of herself and did not touch intimately upon the rest of the world.

Suddenly, a few blocks away from the house, Helen brought the car to a full stop. She was white and shaking.

"I can't drive the rest of the way," she said. "It . . . it's it's too terrible."

She did not say all that was in her mind; did not tell the distraught brother how ghastly it seemed to her that they should have mended their broken love affair as a result of Eva's disillusionment.

Bob raised himself while Helen slid over into his seat. He had no time to get out and go around the car. As he slipped under the wheel Helen put her hands to her face and held them there until his home was reached.

She could not bear the thought that she had been partly to blame for whatever had happened. She wanted to shut out the vision of Brent's evilly handsome face. Why hadn't she broken with him altogether when she discovered what a promiscuous sort he was? His life had been filled with women. She had known it, and yet believed that he could remain true in love.

But that day in his apartment—when she had seen for herself how he behaved when he thought himself engaged to her—that day she should have cut with him finally. It might have brought matters to a crisis earlier—he might have done something that would have caused her to speak of him to Eva, to reveal him to the girl in his true light before this. So ran her thoughts—thoughts that were hard to bear in connection with possible harm to Eva.

They hurried into the house—Bob had his key ready for the lock the instant they reached the door—and were greeted at once by a call from upstairs.

"Is that you Bob? Oh, hurry! hurry!"

It was his mother, frantic and for some reason unable to come down to them.

Bob took the stairs three at a time, forgetful of Helen. She stood for a while with her fingertips pressed tightly to her lips, then, unable to bear longer the strain of uncertainty, followed him.

He was at Eva's door, pleading with her to open it. His mother was on her knees, her face in her apron, sobbing brokenly.

Helen went to her, knelt beside her and drew her close.

Bob put his shoulder to the pine panels. "For God's sake, unlock the door, Eva," he implored. "I'm going to break it open."

There was no answer. Bob drew off and rammed with the full force of his strength. There was a cracknig sound, a slight yielding of the flimsy lock.

Again he made the door the butt of a powerful attack, and this time the panel gave away. Through the splintered opening he thrust an arm and turned the key in the lock on the inside.

His mother, whom Helen had pulled to her feet, pushed in behind him. There had not been a sound from Eva until then. They saw her, sitting drawn up in a heap on her bed, her hair disordered and her eyes staring at them in fixed terror. One arm was flung up against her forehead and in her hand was a small bottle.

She shrieked as they ran toward her, and attempted to put the bottle to her lips.

Bob leaped the remaining steps and snatched it away from her. Her mother sank down upon the side of the bed moaning: "Eva, Eva."

Eva saw the bottle fly from Bob's hand and attempted to spring off the bed and reach for it. He grabbed her and she turned upon him like a wild animal at bay.

She seemed possessed of seven devils, fighting, shrieking, even scratching and biting.

Helen slipped forward and picked up the bottle. Eva had not noticed her until then. Helen rushed out of the room to empty the contents of the bottle in the bathroom.

As Eva saw her disappear through the doorway she became limp in Bob's arms. Her breath escaping in a long, convulsive sigh. She lay still—like a broken toy—a doll with the sawdust poured out.

Bob was shaking like a leaf as he let her down upon her pillows.

"She's fainted, mom," he said pitifully.

Mrs. Ennis roused herself to meet the emergency, forcing aisde the weakness of fright that had overcome her.

Helen had presence of mind enough to fetch a glass of water back with her. With this they bathed Eva's marble-white face and cold wrists.

"We must have a doctor," Bob cried frantically as she failed to respond to their treatment.

"Oh try a little harder," Helen begged. "She couldn't bear any more interference. Here, put the pillow under her feet. There, let her head down flat. Rub her hands hard."

As she spoke she was working like mad over the unconscious girl, pushing Bob aside and taking command in consequence of being the coolest of the three.

Presently, when even she was about to despair of bringing Eva to her senses, she heard a fluttering breath pass her lips, saw her eyelids flicker and her lips move.

"Eva, Eva dear," she cried, but before Eva opened her eyes she stepped away and let Eva's glance fall upon her mother.

For a moment Eva lay in tortured silence her eyes moving searchingly, questioningly, over her mother's worn countenance.

"Oh, mama, mama," she cried at last, reaching up her arms to be taken to her mother's bosom. When she lay enfolded there she was too exhausted, too beaten, to weep.

Her eyelids dropped as do those of a tired child. She whimpered and her mother laid a cheek to her lips.

"What is it, baby?" she said softly, coaxingly. "My poor little chickadee, my little wee one."

Helen and Bob stole quietly out of the room.

"Forgive me, mama darling," Eva whispered, louder now. "I couldn't stand it . . . I loved him with all my heart."

Her mother held her tighter, pressing her cheek in a caressing movement against the silky blond hair, saying nothing, waiting for the confidence she'd prayed her girl would give her.

"I can't live without him," Eva went on, clinging closer, hurting with her slended fingers. "I want him and . . . and he isn't for me. He was never for me. I know it. Bob says he is going to marry Helen—Helen, my dearest friend—oh I'll hate her—I can't help it. I can't help anything. I can't stand it. I can't! I can't! I can't!

She was growing hysterical.

"Hush, hush dear," Mrs. Ennis pleaded. "You have frightened me nearly to death. Please, dear, don't make me suffer any more."

For Eva's own sake she was appealing to her sympathy, knowing as she did, the surest way to rule the girl.

Eva's mounting emotion subsided short of a complete lack of self control. She began to cry normally, wholesomely—as Mrs. Ennis put it to herself.

For uncounted moments she cried and cried, with her mother making soothing noises over her, but offering no word to distract her from the relief of tears.

Helen and Bob waited downstairs. They had much to say to each other but neither could put it into words with the weight of Eva's so nearly tragic fate hanging over them.

They stood by a window, watching the scurrying leaves in the bit of restricted garden at the side of the house. Bob's arm was about Helen. She leaned against him and lost herself in the wonder of their love.

Presently Mrs. Ennis came down to them. Her eyes were red and swollen but there were signs of the calm that followed a storm in her half-smile and her general air.

They felt reassured.

"Eva wants you, Helen," the mother said and then added suddenly: "Oh, you will help her, won't you?"

Stomach Disorders First Revealed by Coated Tongue

Your tongue is nothing more than the upper end of your stomach and intestines. It is the first thing your doctor looks at. It tells at a glance the condition of your digestive system—and physicians say that 90% of all sickness starts with stomach and bowel trouble.

A coated tongue is a danger signal of those digestive disorders which lead to so many kinds of serious illness. It tells why the least exertion tires you out; why you have pains in the bowels, gas, sour stomach, dizzy spells.

Coating on the tongue is a sign that you need Tanlac—the medicine which has helped thousands who were physical wrecks from stomach and bowel troubles—who had "tried everything" in vain and about given up hope.

Tanlac contains no mineral drugs; it is made of barks, herbs and roots. Get a bottle from your druggist today. Your money back if it doesn't help you.

Louisiana Lad Stops Stacy In Fifth Frame of A Wild Contest

Taylor Given Decision Over Whatley While "Preacher" and "Peril" Swatfest Is Called A Draw—Crowd Was Thin But Enthusiastic.

Pierce, long, lean, lanky boxer from down Cotton Valley way—Protege of "Dad" Dean—came up here last night and pointed out the difference between a "country" and a "town" boxer. The pointing was done with rights and lefts to the wind of his opponent and the period to the argument plaie with a solid right to the temple. Bang! Curtains!

Stacy, local boy, is the cleaverer, faster man of the two—but he gave away too many pounds and too many inches to win. This Stacy is good, mighty good—but this Pierce is good, too—and bigger. It was the old story of a good little man against a good big one—and it had the usual ending.

Te fight had a few unusual angles, one developing in the first round when Leavelle, referee, apparently went sound asleep on his feet and let Pierce swing to Staceys' jaw while the latter was talking to the referee, making a claim of foul, back half turned to his opponent. Pierce did hit low, it appeared from the ringside—but not as low as Stacy claimed, and the blow was clearly unintentional. The claim was disallowed and the fighters ordered to go on. The result was only a matter of time.

Whatley and Taylor put on a good show. Whatley, far the heavier of the two, had his hands full with his smaller, more active opponent. The decision giving Taylor the bout was generally popular, fans apparently believed he had clearly outpointed his rival.

Preacher Walker and Perry Briggs stepped six fast rounds, each striving vainly for a knockout. The decision declaring the bout a draw was generally hooted, Perry being the odds-on favorite of the small crowd in attendance.

Leavelle, promoter, announced that next week's card would be held in a new rink on East Third street, with Johnny Hall and Hi Mitchell as main eventers—one bout fans here have been anxious to see.

The crowd last night made up in enthusiasm what it lacked in numbers, the increased price of admission evidently having scared some of the faithful away. However, next Thursday evening the old scale of 50, 75 and $1 will be resumbed and one of the fastest cards of the season presented.

Union Chief Testifies in Own Defense

Disowning Communist doctrines and denying any part in the killing of Police Chief O. F. Aderholt at Gastonia, N. C., last June, Fred Erwin Beal, textile workers' organizer, is pictured above as he testified in his own defense at the trial at Charlotte of seven men for murder. Beal declared he and several other strike leaders were hiding on the floor of his office during the mob battle which resulted in Chief Aderholt's death. In the background, on his bench, is Trial Judge M. V. Barnhill.

A Hint to the Big Ten

Ted Rosequist was a tackle at John Carroll University, a Catholic school at Cleveland. Suddenly he decided to go to Ohio State University. Coach Ralph Vince at Carroll did not like to lose Rosequist because he was a good tackle. So he investigated.

As a result, Vince charged that Hal Ells of Toledo, a senior at Ohio State, had lured away Rosequist with an offer of free tuition, lodging and spending money should Rosequist come to Ohio State. Ells and all athletic officials at Ohio State denied the charges.

Rosequist, however, decided to go to Ohio State. He went to Columbus where he was given a job for several hours each morning smashing baggage. In the evening he peeled potatoes at Beta Theta Pi fraternity house. Everything looked O. K.

Low Grades

When Ted arrived at Ohio State he applied for admission to the College of Commerce. He had brought along no transscript of his grades at Carroll, however, so he was admitted provisionally, pending arrival of the transcript.

A couple of days ago the transcript arrived from Carroll. And Bland L. Stradley, examiner, refused to admit Rosequit because his grades were unsatisfactory. That left young Rosequit potentially in the position of Alexander, with a world of power, but no more worlds to conquer.

The Big Shots

But hear Mr. Rosequit himself tell it:

"I am not going to leave Columbus and I am going to State," he is said to have told Cleveland reporters. "I'll get this thing fixed up. I've got big shots behind me down here. I like it here. I've been working out with the freshman team. Ernie Godfrey is a swell coach. I'm pledged to this fraternity and I'm going to stay."

Just what the "big shots" will be able to do for Rosequits remains to be determined. His story sounds to us like that of a man going about trying to get someone to take care of a parking ticket for him. The result is bound to be interesting.

Valuable Process?

Officials at John Carroll intimated that Rosequit would not be received with open arms should he apply for re-entry at Carroll. Registar Ray C. Miller said:

"Mr. Rosequit could not enter John Carroll without a special ruling from the enrollment committee. His grades last year were so low that he was placed on probation several weeks ago by the committee."

If the "big shots" Rosequit says are behind him are able to put the young man through in some way despite the attitude taken by the registrar, some of the other Big Ten schools ought to find out just how this little thing is done. The process should be patented.

DID YOU KNOW THAT—

In five years of football competition, "Buddy Hackman, star halfback of the University of Tennessee, has never played on a losing team—And never once has he been on a team that was trailing the opposition at any stage of the game—Young Benny Frey, the swell pitcher who came to the Reds from Nashville held the Cubs to seven hits in a game recently but lost 1 to 0—The reason was Charley Root—Eddy Mack says he sprained his ankle while fighting Tony Canzoneri, in explaining why he went down without being hit—The first baseball diamond was laid out 90 years ago by Major Abner Doubleday, West Point graduate—The game was conceived out of the English game of rounders—Sam Hildreth, who died recently, was a jockey with Vice President Charles Curtis at about the time in the same "leaky roof" circuit.

Lady Says She Was Much Better After She Had Taken Cardui.

McComb, Miss.—"A few years ago, I was a sick woman and rather discouraged," says Mrs. H. E. Dunaway, of 821 Pearl River Avenue, this city. "I was so weak and thin, I was not able to do my work as it should have been done.

"This made me fret a good deal, and did not help my condition.

"I had pains across my back and lower part of my body. My nights were spent in rolling from one side of the bed to the other, hoping I would soon go to sleep. Then, when morning would come, I would be just as tired as when I went to bed.

"A neighbor, seeing how badly I felt, told me to try Cardui. After I had taken one bottle, I was much better. I kept on taking Cardui, and I was stronger and slept much better at night. I have been recommending it ever since."

Thousands of women have written that Cardui has helped them.

This well-known medicine is composed of purely vegetable ingredients. Try it.

Britain's Giant of Sky Lacks Only Privacy of Ocean Liner

The five huge motors of the British dirigible R-101 ride in gondolas such as the one at upper left. The view of the lounge of the ship (uppe rright) and that of the ship in the hangar at lower left contrast the size of the windows at closeup and at a distance. Maj. G. H. Scott (lower right) is commander.

By WADE WERNER
(AP Feature Service Writer)

CARDINTON, England, Oct. 18.—(AP)—The narrowing margin between luxurious travel by sea and luxurious travel by air seems to have been whittled down to a matter of comparative privacy.

One still can have more privacy at sea than on a big airliner like the new British R-101—but that, a stroll through the huge liner here suggests, is about all that is lacking. Excapt, parhaps, a swimming pool.

The two passenger decks are contained in the outer envelope. Even the control car, although it projects below the keel of the ship, is an easily accessible from the upper deck as the ground floor of a house is from the upper stories.

Only the "power eggs" containing the five 585 horsepower Diesel engines are isolated from the interior of the ship.

Quarters for the crew are distributed in various parts of the hull.

The passenger staterooms, with room for 100 persons but berths at present for only 52, are arranged in corridors simlar to those aboard an ocean liner, with space for an upper and lower berth in each. Partitions, to save weight, are of canvas. That means a noisy passenger will be hard by everyone.

Lavatories are close to the staterooms, but the water is carefully rationed. Each passenger gets his quota, and after he has washed the water is carefully piped into tanks, not thrown away, for water is the fluid ballast of the R-101, and must not be wasted.

Matches, in view of the 5,000,000 cubic feet of hydrogen in this gaint ship, are strictly banned. Yet no passenger need suffer for lack of a smoke. A fireproof smoking room about the size of an average living room is provided. Electric lighters are used instead of matches.

The cheery dining salon is another. It seats 50 persons and through a great, slanting window the pasengers can view the landscape gliding by far below them.

The largest public room on the ship is the lounge, which is 60 feet long and 32 feet wide, with a polished floor of light plywood for dancing, and writing tables next to the walls for those who want to write postcards in the clouds.

On each side of the lounge is a promenade deck, with a rail on which passengers can lean as they look out and down through the great windows in the ship's outer covering.

The ship has a heating system, using the radiators of the five engines.
